Never ride with your arm or elbow on the outside of any vehicle.

The man who attempts to alight from a steam car while in motion is a foel.

In stepping from any wheeled vehicle while in motion, let it be from the rear and not in front of the wheels; for then if you fall, the wheels cannot run over you. Never attempt to cross the road or street in front of a passing vehicle; for if you should stumble or slip, you would be run over. Make up the half minute lost by waiting until the vehicle has passed by increased diligence in other directions. If you want to sleep well at night, avoid sleeping during daylight.

It is miserable contomy to save time by robbing yourself of necessary sleep.

If you find yourself inclined to wake up of the outside the mother allowance of this most part, of can destinating fare. It must be the digestion the every fruit is not equally wholesome, let the digestion be as powerful as it may be. Nuts, for example—consisting as they do, for the most part, of condensed albuminoid and fatty matters—cannot companie in a sceptance, either by the palate or the stomach, with other succeulent kinds, even though they contain in the same bulk a far greater amount of nutriment. A little of such fruit is enough for digestion, and that little is best cooked. Nevertheless, if we take fruit as a whole, ripe and sound of course, and consider the variety, its lightness and nourishing properties, whether the variety its lightness and nourishing properties, whether the variety its lightness and nourishing properties, whether the variety is lightness and nourishing properties, whether the variety is lightness and nourishing properties, whether the variety is larged to remove the handle bar, leaving only the big wheel, and, mounting, propelled it with his hands. If you find yourself inclined to wake up at a regular hour in the night, and remain awake, you can break up the habit in three days, by getting up as soon as you wake, and not going to sleep again until your usual hour for retiring, or retire two hours later and rise two hours earlier for three days in succession not sleeping a bree days in succession, not sleeping a three days in succession, not sleeping a moment during the daytime.

If infants and young people are inclined to be wakeful during the night, or very early in the norning, put them to bed later at night; and beside arrange that their day map shall always be in the forenoon.

"Order is heaven's first law," regularity in eating, sleeping and exercise has a large share in securing a long and beauth. The Hebrew women are the longest lived and the colored men the shortest. It appears from the gathered statistics of the world that women have a greater tenacity of life than men. Nature worships the world that women have a greater tennacity of life than men. Nature worships the female in all its varieties. At a relatively earlier in eating, sleeping and exercise has a large share in securing a long and health ful life.

If you are caught in a drenching rain, or fall into the water, by all means keep in motion sufficiently vigorous to prevent the slightest chilly sensation when you reach the house, then change your clothes with great rapidity before a blazing fire and drink instantly a pint of some hot liquid. To allow wet clothes to dry upon you, unless by keeping np a vigorous exercise until the roughly dried, is suicided.

If you are in a passion shut your mouth, for words will increase it. Many a person has dropped dead in a rage.

If does not require a word to make a villainous lie; whatever is intended to mislead or deceive, that is the falsehood. So it does not require a dagger or a bullet to kill a man; the mean slander, a contempt. males in cities are more prone to consumption than in the country. All old countries not disturbed by emigration have a majority of females in the population. In royal families the statisties show more daughters than sons. The Hebrew woman is exceptionally long lived; the colored danger of eating too much, certain danger of sleeping too much; it does not require a dagger or a bullet to kill a man; the mean slander, a contemp-tuous shrug, may blast the reputation and wilt the heart and life away. A superstition used to exist that a child which did not cry when sprinkled in baptism would not live long. In the west of Scotland, according to James Napier, it was considered uninchy to call a child by any name before tite of baptism was performed.

When children seemed prematurely smart, it was believed they would not live long. Shake-spuare puts this superstition into the mouth of Richard III. Bulleton more males born than femnales, yet there are more than six per cent. of females in the living populations, from which statistics we conclude that all women who can be superstition into the mouth of Richard III. Bulleton more males than sons. The Hebrew woman is exceptionally long lived; the colored man exceptionally long lived; the was believed they would not live long. Shake-speare puts this superstition into the mouth of Richard III. Bulwer mentions the tradition possibly obtain one of those rapidly de-parting men ought to marry, and that, as men are likely to become very scarce, they cannot be sufficiently prized by the other accentration conservations the tradition concerning children born open handed that they will be likeral and big hearted. A character in one of Dekker's plays says: 'I am a most wretched fellow; surely some left handed priest christened me, I am so unlucky,"

According to Irish and Scotch fairy superstitions, the elves, though in the main harmlers, have the had reputation of streting children from the cradle and substituting for them changelings who bear resemblance to the stoken infants, but are ugive little creatures and power.

THE BOYAL PLATE. A large amount of very valuable plate was sent to Osborne from Windsor Castle for Boyal wedding. The necessity of bringing everything from London or Windsor was one of the most tiresome changelings who bear resemblance to the stolen infants, but are ugly fittle creatures and never thrive. On such a theft of a lemale infant, who is carried to fairy land, but in the course of years returns to her parents, James Hogg founded his fine ballad of "Kilmeny" (Queen's Wake.)

In some parts of Scotland it is a popular sotion among the lower classes that when a child is for the first time taken into the open air the bearer of it should give something to eat to the first person met, otherwise the child will be unfacky. The gift is called the "bairn's piece." when a child was taken from its mother, and carried outside the bedroom for the first time after its birth, it was unlucky to take it upstairs, and unlucky to take it dewnstairs. It was not considered lucky to carry a baby into a neighbour's honse until the mother took it herself; and this it was unlucky even for her to do until she had been to church. It was considered nalucky for children to walk back, ward white going on an errand. It was decemed unlucky to measure a baby, and if its mails in moved from one palace to another a memmoved from one palace to another a mem-orandum of the fact is registered, in order that in due course it may be reclaimed for the palace to which it properly belongs. Pictures are often transferred, but hitherto the Crown plate has always been kept at uniterly to meanor a baby, and if its mile were cut before a year old it would turn out a thirl; it was unlacky for a boy to wear tron seen made on a Friday; and to sweep dust over the feet of the girls would prevent them getting bushands.

Mr. Mudge's Treable.

Some years ago, when the writer was a reporter, it develved on him to write for the same edition an account of the presentation of a gold-headed cane to the Rev. Mr. Mudge, the clergyman of the same edition an account of the presentation of a gold-headed cane to the Rev. Mr. Mudge, the clergyman of the place, and a description of a new hogiskilling machine that had just been in operation at the factory. Now what made the Rev. Mr. Mudge mad was this: The inconsiderate who made up the forms got the two accounts mixed up in a frightful manner, and when it went to press something like this was the appalling result:

The Coffee Drunkard.

"What a bright-eyed man," said a re porter who leaned against the cashier's desk of a restaurant near the Public Build-ings one day last week. The man in question had just paid a ten-cent check and slipped out of the door with a jerky move ment and a swinging of the cane be can ried which decidedly endangered the per ple's peace.

their agents. In one case a large agency has been thrown up. The delay in the publication of the book has brought about some serious complications, which may considerably reduce the sum which it was expected the estate would derive from the work. The first volume is to be out i December, and the second in March fol-lowing. The delay is a long one, and it would be very difficult to sustain public interest in any book for that length of time. But it is the more difficult to do so n the case of Grant's, since there hav been numerous cheap publications assuming to tell the story of his life issued since his death by houses which deal in subscription books only. These have glutted the market.

Another important factor has been the price of the book to agents. As a usual thing the general agents of a subscription book get a discount of from 60 to 70 per cent, generally the latter. They in turn give individual agents about 35 per cent. In the case of the Grant memoirs the general agents receive 40 per cent, and only eral agents receive 40 per cent. and only 25 per cent is allowed individual agents. The difference is sufficiently large to pre-vent any active building by agents, and this, combined with the delay, has made the sale drug.-Boston Transcript
